Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens, their automobiles returned to Park Row ready to respond to telephone calls from various police stations announcing that prisoners were awaiting transportation. The cars were kept busy most of the night.

While Friday night the raids had the aspect of a general round-up, last night's were aimed at individuals or whom warrants had been obtained, generally upon information furnished by persons already under arrest.

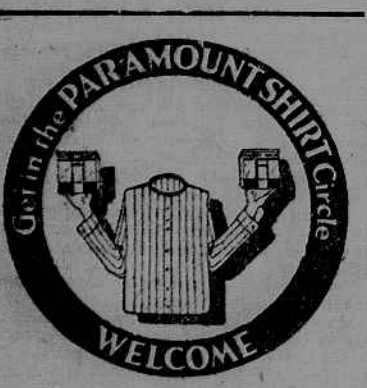

One of the men in the first batch were Edward Lore, editor of the East Side Hungarian publication "Elore," Nathan Schub, of 100 Monroe Street, and Harry Rothenhaus, of 28 Market Street.

Expert safe openers, who had a few cans of nitro-glycerine and carpet squares and other materials, accompanied a raiding party headed by Detective Sergeant James J. Gegan and Jerome Murphy, of the police bomb squad, yesterday afternoon on a visit to the offices of "The Communist World," in 222 Fifth Street, and "Elore," a Hungarian daily, published in 15 East Third Street.

The men in charge at both places, however, consented to open the safes when they were served with warrants issued by Chief Magistrate McAdoo, through Archibald E. Stevenson, on behalf of the Lusk committee.

The raiders removed from the safes a quantity of canceled checks, check stubs and other documents checked by the Lusk committee in its investigation of radical activities in New York. After these had been examined it was said that information had been obtained that would establish the identity of persons who have lent financial support to Communist publications.

Before it had been announced in Washington yesterday that Lieutenant General Bullard, commanding the Department of the East, had been instructed to turn over Camp Upton to the Department of Labor, to be used as a concentration camp for deportees. Acting Commissioner of Immigration Uhl said that such an arrangement would be inconvenient unless a separate set of examiners was provided to conduct the hearings at Camp Upton.

Mr. Uhl said that preliminary hearings had begun at Ellis Island to determine whether any of those held as alien Communists were actually citizens of the United States. Out of 451, he said, twelve had convinced the inspectors of the immigration department that they were citizens by naturalization. These were sent back to Manhattan yesterday afternoon, as the Department of Labor has no jurisdiction if the radical is a citizen.

When eleven of these citizens landed at the Harge today, however, they found that their troubles were not over, for they were taken into custody again by Department of Justice men and probably will have to stand trial in a state court on the charge of criminal anarchy.

The twelfth person released was a woman, Rose Baron, of 317 Second Avenue. She was permitted to return to her home where her mother is ill. Mr. Uhl said he had ordered the release of the woman because she had been "improperly committed," there being no warrant for her arrest. Miss Baron's departure left forty women and 401 men radicals on Ellis Island. They sleep in dormitories on the top floor of the administration building and are fed one of the large dining rooms. During the day they are kept in four large rooms on the third floor of the administration building.

Each of these rooms has a cement flooring and a wainscoting of white tile, so that it resembles a New York lunch room stripped of furniture.

On the door of one of these rooms was unlocked yesterday afternoon, the sun was streaming through the window bars on a Russian Soviet in the process of organization. About 125 other members of the bureau were in the room. They were all dressed in the same uniform, consisting of a blue jacket, blue trousers and a blue cap.

The speaker's flannel shirt and shabby dark coat were reinforced with a thick towel as a muffler about his neck. His thick black hair was too long to win approval from members of the barbers' union, and his rather untidy face was bristly with a three days' growth of beard. He paused with upraised arm and clenched fist when his auditors gave a sibilant warning that his words were reaching ears which he did not intend to offend.

After a moment he continued his talk but the fire had gone from his manner and his gestures were spiritless, so that the sudden lack of interest in his remarks shown by his auditors was unnecessary to convince his newest listeners that he had changed his mind.

A similar meeting was in progress in another room. Here and there in the group could be distinguished the wear of three or four days' growth of beard. A similar meeting was in progress in another room. Here and there in the group could be distinguished the wear of three or four days' growth of beard.

The women were quite a cheerful lot. About half of the forty wore their hair bobbed. When the door of their detention room was opened yesterday several of those who have not cut their tresses were combing them carefully. All of the women apparently were continuing to take their interest in their personal appearance which the men for the present, anyway, have lost.

The faces of the women were clean and the cheeks of a few bore traces of rouge. Most of them were young and none appeared to be more than thirty years old. Nearly every one wore a woolen sweater.

All appeared relieved when they were informed that messages they had written had been telegraphed to friends and relatives.

They were asked yesterday how many of them had husbands among the men held on Ellis Island. About twelve held up their hands. Then they were asked how many had sweethearts among the men held and all of the others raised their hands with a laugh.

Acting Commissioner Uhl has assured the married women that they will be given an opportunity to see their husbands as frequently as possible during their stay on the island and the same privilege is to be extended to the sweetheart pairs.

Mr. Uhl also has assured them that each interested couple will be assigned to the same boat in case they do not establish citizenship or in some other way escape deportation.

The guards on Ellis Island say the present lot of radicals are not as nasty as those who accompanied Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman on the army transport Buford. When that lot were summoned to attend hearings before immigration inspectors they refused to answer to their names and only with great difficulty were they finally identified.

This lot, however, was given no chance to cause any such trouble. They were photographed with a conspicuous number pinned to their chests before they were released in the detention rooms.

Dr. Michael Mislisig, 155 East Eighth Street, who is declared by the Lusk Committee to be treasurer of the Russian Federation, was adjudged in contempt yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Vernon McDavis for failure to answer questions put to him by Senator Clayton R. Lusk and Deputy Attorney General Samuel A. Berger, relating to the federation's executive committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The government's campaign to rid the nation of more than 4,000 aliens, members of the Communist and Communist Labor parties arrested in recent raids, promises to be a long-drawn-out fight. Department of Justice officials declared today.

With the radicals fortified by strong legal talent and a "slush fund" to finance their opposition to deportation, and the immigration service inadequately supplied either with men or the means to handle the situation, the help of Congress was considered absolutely necessary by officials.

Anthony Caminetti, Commissioner General of Immigration, appeared before the House Appropriations Committee during the day with an appeal for funds to allow expansion of his force to deal with the details of deportation proceedings. The Commissioner asked for at least ten more lawyers.

Officials also explained that throughout the country the work of perfecting cases against the radicals held would be slow because of the small number of immigration inspectors. Added to this was the fact, revealed by information obtained in the raids, that the radicals have been instructed to make use of every form of delay known to the legal world.

In view of the department's plans to continue the arrest of known Communist and Communist Labor party members, Federal agents in the border districts were instructed to guard closely against attempts of the radicals to escape into either Mexico or Canada. Three or four such attempts have been made since the raids started Friday.

More arrests are planned in Chicago, New York, Detroit, and Boston and several smaller cities in the East. Federal agents have trailed many persons said to be ringleaders in the agitation for an overthrow of the government by force and to-night the arrest of several of these was regarded only as a matter of hours.

Martens Calls Arrest Of Weinstein Another Evidence of Hysteria

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The arrest of Gregory Weinstein, Chancellor of the Soviet Bureau in New York to-day, was declared to-night to be "another expression of the prevalent hysteria" by Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, self-styled Ambassador from the Russian Soviet government to the United States, and Secretary Nuorteva of the Soviet Bureau.

Martens and Nuorteva are in Washington seeking a hearing before the sub-committee of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate recently appointed to investigate Russian propaganda in the United States.

"There is no more reason for Weinstein's arrest than for that of any other member of the bureau," said Nuorteva. "There has been nothing in the activities of the bureau to warrant Federal interference. We have not done anything against your government."

The Evil of Substitution

A few years ago we heard much of the "evil" of substitution.

When a dealer deceives his customer and misrepresents the identity of goods called for, "substitution" is in fact obtaining money under false pretense.

But when a dealer persuades his customer to take Bjax Glory Soap instead of Ivory, for which he had asked, that is not substitution—it's competition.

All progress is a matter of substitution. Misrepresentation is the "evil" and as advertised goods are better known, fraud becomes more difficult and less profitable.

Without monopoly, competition always persists. Advertising tends to create a monopoly of demand.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—A drastic session bill, which would arm the executive branch of the government with power to prosecute any individual citizen or alien who seeks to overthrow the government by force of violence, was introduced in the House to-day by Representative Graham, of Pennsylvania.

The measure defines sedition, covers conspiracies to accomplish the overthrow of government by force and provides heavy penalties for interference with the decrees of the courts.

It is the work of a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee, the House branch of the government all the dozen measures submitted by various members of the House during the present session. It will be taken up by the full committee in the near future and also will be submitted to the Department of Justice for an opinion by the Attorney General.

Sedition Section of Bill
Its introduction to-day came as a consequence of the determination of leaders in Congress to give the executive branch of the government all the power it needs to cope with a situation such as has arisen in connection with the recent Federal raids, where hundreds of Americans arrested as revolutionists were let go because of the lack of a Federal statute under which they could be prosecuted even for preaching the use of force to overturn the government.

The bill makes provision for compelling the testimony of witnesses in cases arising under it, declaring that no person shall be excused on the ground that he incriminates himself, but adds that where such testimony is given in obedience to a proper subpoena and under oath such witness shall not be subject "to any penalty or forfeiture."
